Botanical implies the usage of plants and plant-like features in the interiors of your house. The design has gained prominence over several years and is quite popular nowadays.

Being a part of nature, we cannot attain ultimate peace and comfort by finding substitutes in inorganic substances. A disturbed mind cannot explore the beauty of life in the surroundings. Hence, it is the need of every living creature to adapt and thrive with nature.

Having fresh flowers and green leaves around the house help enhance tranquility in the environment. This is the reason why Botanical Décor is the new norm and a favourite of interior designers nowadays.

Here are a few tips that help you to rock the botanical theme perfectly.

Make the most of wood

Sustainability is the game-changer in almost every sphere of life, and interior design is no exception to it. When we talk about sustainable artifices, nothing comes to our minds before wood, which is not only natural but also functional and luxurious. Wood can be treated organically to make it shine like marble, though, it looks equally elegant in its raw and unpolished form. It can be customised perfectly as per your needs and purpose. Hence, from doors to dressers and furniture pieces to décor items; wood is the ultimate choice for mavens across the globe. Also, being environment-friendly, wood flooring ensures comfort in all types of climatic conditions.

As furniture plays a pivotal role in interior design, wood is the most compatible choice in all spaces of the house. Be it a giant bed in the sleeping room, a sofa in the drawing-room, a console in the lounge, or a table in the dining room; the choices are endless as long as they revolve around wood.

Use indoor plants

Look for indoor plants available in the nurseries near your area. Philodendron Oxycardium, Sansevieria or Snake Plant, Red Aglaonema or the Royal Treasure, White Pothos, Ficus Bonsai and Carmona Bonsai are some of the beautiful indoor plants that not only spur up the interior of your home but also help purify the air. Along with natural plants, the corners of your house can also be renovated using colourful and vibrant faux plants. You can style the plant by handcrafting the pot or decorating it using your imagination. There are multiple options available in the market. However, in case your budget does not permit, you can use your imagination to make a pot from household items, including canes.

Allow plenty of sunlight to flow in

Lighting is an indispensable part of interior designing, in the absence of which, the manifestation of various elements in the house is meaningless as well as impossible. The most vibrant source of light on the Earth is the Sun. An intelligent designer always emphasises ample sunlight in the house. It not only illuminates all corners of the house but also nourishes the residents with Vitamin D. Besides, the optimum use of sunlight in a house helps reduce dependence on thermal power, one of the foremost causes of air pollution. Natural light is an essential aspect of botanical décor, which is both economical and sustainable.
